Slow-Dating Toolkit: How to Use

Welcome!

You're about to dive into someone's personal world through their objects, stories, and voice. This isn't your usual swipe-right encounter. It's slower, deeper, and way more interesting. Here's how to make the most of it.

Step 1: Collect

Take your time going through the author's collection of personal objects and notes. Look closely, and soak in the stories behind each item.

Step 2: Analyse

Put on your headphones and listen to their recorded descriptions. Let their voice bring the story to life.

Step 3: Respond

Write a thoughtful letter back. Share your impressions, ask questions, or just invite for a date/friendly meeting. Feel free to add drawings, poems, or anything personal.

Cocktails in Mad Men are not only used to evoke the era but also as comic and plot devices. Two cocktail moments spring to mind immediately: first, when Don Draper makes Conrad Hilton an Old Fashioned, which leads to the award of the Hilton Hotel advertising account, and second, when Roger Sterling throws up a bellyful of Martini and oysters in full view of a client.

Old Fashioned

Ingredients

1 brown sugar cube
3 dashes Angostura bitters
1 tablespoon soda water
50 ml (2 oz) bourbon
twist of orange peel
maraschino cherry, to garnish

Method

Dissolve the sugar cube in the Angostura bitters and a tablespoon of club soda and the bourbon in a tumbler. Add the orange peel and muddle everything together. Add ice cubes and garnish with a maraschino cherry.
